

I have subscribed to XM radio because they can air information that is different and often better than FM and AM radio. Due to the absence of commercials they are not pressured by sponsors to conform to the same boring playlists as local stations are. This is like cable for the radio, there is NO reason why anyone should have to regulate what they air because, by subscribing, you are saying that you want to have the XM programming available to you. IN ITS ENTIRETY. Please leave them alone! We live in a capitalist society and just because a company arose that provides a service perhaps better than the department of transportation radio, it does not give you the right to silence them in an effort to level the playing field. If the consumers were not happy with the product, XM radio would not be the most popular and successful satellite radio service around. As long as the consumer is happy, the FCC should stay out of it. It all boils down to the old adage 'do not fix what is not broken.' Thank you.
